Welcome back...

Your very own Roseland Festival is back for 2024 with a fresh, exciting 10 days of events.

I am proud to have chaired an almost completely new committee this year who, through enthusiasm, and energy have helped create an exciting new programme for you. I would like to thank everyone for their hard work and at the same time thank Graham Turpin, the previous chair, and his committee for establishing the Festival as such a highlight of the local social calendar.

A huge thanks as well to all our supporters, sponsors, venues, stewards and Friends. If you want to become more a part of the Festival then look at the back of the programme on how to join as a Friend and get advanced priority on booking event tickets. Friends can volunteer to be stewards and can attend the event free of charge – so it's a great way to get involved and enjoy yourself.

In amongst all the new ideas, we have not lost sight of the key principles which the charity was set up to provide: a high quality event and promote arts, music and culture in all its aspects, trying to keep tickets affordable and make grant donations to local schools and organisations to support creative arts on the Roseland for young people. This year we will be providing grants of £4,000 to the local schools. Take a look at the article at the back of the programme for how this has helped schools in giving their students a taste of the arts.

So what do we have in store for 2024? We have craft workshops, children's theatre, local folk music, walks, books talks and some delicious wine and food events. Plus some amazing new music to the Roseland including Nathan Ball, Daisy Rickman and Nancy May a contemporary classical soprano currently touring with Russell Watson. All on your doorstep. What more could you ask for?

And finally, don't forget to follow our social media pages for news and updates and to share your experiences of the Festival so that we can bring you more great events in 2025.

Adrian Jones - Chair

LIVE MUSIC

Singer-songwriter Nathan Ball

Finding inspiration in the outdoors, much of Nathan's material is connected to his surroundings. "It's where I write best; by the sea, in the mountains, in the woods. I love being totally immersed in nature so naturally those themes find their way into the music. I love being in the ocean – just being in it, and feeling totally insignificant. It's a reminder of the order of things. Nathan's work fuses two chief loves – classic song writing and an eagerness to experiment and push sonic boundaries. Perhaps unexpectedly, he finds inspiration in left-field house music.'

Festival Grants to Local Schools

An important part of the charity's mission is to advance, improve, develop and maintain public education in, and appreciation of, the arts and music in all its aspects. We fulfil this aim by offering grants to the five local schools every year, plus small grants to individuals and groups based on the Roseland, to help with arts-related projects.

Following the 2023 festival, given the profit made and healthy financial status of the charity, we will pay out grants of £500 to the four local primary schools and £2,000 to the Roseland Academy.

Funds made available from the 2022 festival resulted in some wonderful projects. Gerrans Primary School were able to offset the cost of a minibus to take pupils to the Hall for Cornwall for a theatre experience, whilst St Mawes primary school used the funds to support a trip to Truro where the children visited the Royal Cornwall Museum and Truro Cathedral. Tregony Community Primary school were able to contribute to the cost of 30 new Ukuleles for a new music club encouraging children to learn and play an instrument. Veryan C of E Primary School invited an artist to the school to enhance their topic, ending in a gallery day for parents where the children showcased their work.

The Roseland Academy used their funds to run a cross-curricular expressive arts project for The Academy and partner primary schools in the summer term, functioning as a collaborative transition arts project to help prepare primary pupils for their transition to secondary school, as well as developing their creative skills. The funding was able to engage professional visiting artists, Meier Williams and Rob Mennear, who led a series of creative workshops linking visual and performing arts.
